

WOLF ROAD ON VAST PROGRAM

Cook County to Spend Millions For Paving And Bridges On Wolf Road

The vision of Wolf Road being paved from Kankakee to Wheeling, serving as a great outer belt line for Chicago, is now heading toward being a reality, since the Cook County Board of Commissioners have included the paving of 32 miles of Wolf Road in Cook County in their gigantic road program for 1933 opening of "Century of Progress Exposition" or World's Fair.

President A. J. Cermak and members of the Cook County Board have approved the plan to utilize the gas tax funds for widening and completing county and city main arteries to and from Chicago.

According to the road program of Cook County, this county is going to spend over two million dollars on paving Wolf Road within the next four years, commencing with this year.

The project recommended for construction in 1929 on Wolf Road is from Butterfield to Ogden, a distance of 3.7 miles at a cost of $185,000.

The plan for 1930 calls for an expenditure of $3,320,000 for road construction in Cook County and under this plan Wolf Road is to be paved from Higgins Road to Milwaukee Avenue, a distance of 9.3 miles at a cost of $465,000.

The 1931 program calls for the largest share of Wolf Road paving as follows:

Wolf Road—Higgins to Butterfield, 8.5 miles at a cost of $425,000.

Wolf Road—47th to German church road, a distance of 4.5 miles at a cost of $225,000.

Wolf Road—95th street south to 143rd street west of Orland Park to connect with present paving on Wolf Road, a distance of 6 miles at a cost of $300,000.

A big viaduct over the Northwestern railroad yards and a bridge across the drainage canal 95th st., to German church road are to be constructed in 1933 at a cost of $650,000.

With this paving completed Wolf Road will be paved all the way from Kankakee to Wheeling with the exception of 6 1/2 miles in Will County. Here Wolf Road has been used as a political football for years and petty jealousies and factional fights between Mokena factions and the Will County Board of Supervisors has held up the paving of this gap.

Mr. Cleveland, head of the Department of Public Works and Buildings at Springfield, advises that the Will County Board can use the gas tax money which will accrue to the county under the present gas tax, to pave the gap on Wolf Road in Will County.

A Few Things L. G. Bruder Has Done For Mokena

L. G. Bruder, President of the Mokena Development and Hard Road Improvement Association has done more for Mokena than he is being credited for.

Mr. Bruder has had the interest of Mokena at heart and has never looked for any personal gain when ever he has done something for the benefit of the community.

Here are some of the things he has done for Mokena:

Had the village place an electric street light at the crossing near the Rock Island depot.

Had the Rock Island light the depot platform before a night operator was placed here.

Secured special rates and tickets for Mokena students attending Joliet High School.

Had the Rock Island place cinders around the depot, thus doing away with mud holes.

Had the Rock Island place posts around the depot to keep autos from parking too close to the right of way and thus avoid possible accidents.

Was instrumental in advocating the paving of Wolf Road from Kankakee to Wheeling and in advertising this highway all over the state.

All these accomplishments have been for the public good without one cent of expense to the public.

The News-Bulletin believes in giving credit where credit is due.

Publicity Did The Stunt!

Publicity did the stunt! It was thru wide spread and persistent advertising that Wolf Road, which was a dirt road for most of the distance two years ago and a very little known and travelled highway, received during the strenuous hard road fight made by the Mokena Wolf Road Association and The News-Bulletin two years ago, that this highway is now about to become one of the most important roads in the state of Illinois.

All the credit is due to the publicity given this highway thru the efforts of L. G. Bruder, The News-Bulletin and other Wolf Road Boosters.

Shortly after the Mokena Development and Hard Road Improvement Association was formed after a meeting called by Peter Michalson at the Rock Island depot in Mokena January 3rd, 1927, a publicity committee was organized with Mr. Bruder as chairman.

Immediately Mr. Bruder saw that Wolf Road needed a lot of advertising to make the public officials realize the importance of this road as a great outer belt highway for Chicago. Mr. Bruder and the editor of the News-Bulletin got together on a publicity campaign. Maps of Wolf Road were prepared, data regarding the importance of the highway as an outer belt line was prepared. Don C. Hall also took a very active part in this publicity campaign and secured interesting and vital historical facts from the Chicago Historical Society, showing that Wolf Road was founded over 300 years ago by the Indians when they made a trail from the Kankakee river to Wisconsin. Thousands of stickers, folders, maps, circulars, etc., were printed by the News-Bulletin and sent to all the Chambers of Commerce, Kiwanis, Rotary, Lions and Business Men's Club along the Wolf Road from Wheeling on the north to Kankakee on the south. The attention of the Cook County officials was especially called to this highway and Mr. Bruder had personal interviews with the Cook County commissioners time and again.

The Legislature being in session at Springfield at the time, literature advertising Wolf Road was sent to every Senator and representative and even a bill was introduced asking a state appropriation for the paving of Wolf Road, but the bill was killed.

Road meetings were held at Mokena every Monday night for several months and this intensive publicity campaign stirred up residents along Wolf Road in Orland township and they too, joined hands with the Mokena Wolf Road Boosters and took the matter up with the result that the Cook County Board voted to make Wolf Road a state aid road from the Cook and Will County line north of Mokena to Wheeling, a distance of 40 miles. Later the Board of County Commissioners ordered Wolf Road paved from 143rd street Orland to the Cook and Will County line, a distance of 5 miles.

In the meantime route 51 was located on Wolf Road from Kankakee to Green Garden. When the gap now remaining is paved, Wolf Road will be a paved highway clear thru as originally planned by the Mokena Wolf Road Boosters.

Now Cook County is planning to complete all paving on Wolf Road in Cook County before the opening of the World's Fair in 1933.

Mokena is now on the border of a great trunk line there is no reason why it should not develop.

Mokena Defeats Blue Island 10-7

Mokena won their fourth straight Sunday, beating Blue Island 10 and 7 and it was some game, too.

We hopped off to a two-run lead in the first inning. Ollie Benson doubled to right center, and Sorenson knocked one straight up over the infield about four or five miles that Donnelly couldn't gage when it came down out of the clouds. He ran around in a ring trying to get under it, but it fell safe. Hoo-ray for our side. Knudson lammed one at Beard, who couldn't handle it, and Benson scored from third. Sorenson scored a minute later on the throw to second to get Knudson going down. Knudson made the bag, but was tossed out at third when McGovney grounded to Jolier. Hohenstein was called out on strikes.

Nothing doing in the second, but Blue Island tied the score in the third. Benson lined one past Kohl's noodle and went to second on Thomas' sacrifice. Kohl to McGovney. Marquez hit to center and Benson scored. Marquez going to third on Art Benson's throw to the plate. We don't know why Benson threw home, because he didn't have a Chinaman's chance of getting his namesake going in and he let a man get another base, and that man counted a minute later, too, when Jolier bunted one thru Paddy Hohenstein's legs. That was poor baseball. Jolier tried to steal, and he did steal, but he went over the bag too far and Sorenson nailed him. Hohenstein threw out Hoefer.

We all struck out in the fourth. Jolier sure had the bug on us that

Sentiment Divided On Mokena Sewer

The new $54,680 Mokena sewer system is the chief topic of interest in Mokena right now. Sentiment on the proposition is divided. Those in favor of the sewer system say that it will be the making of the village; that it will increase property values and will be a big factor in getting people to locate here and develop Mokena. The advocates of the sewer system further point out that the cost spread over a 20 year period will not be a burden and will be paid in easy installments.

On the other hand those opposed to the sewer system point out that

A special meeting of the Tinley Park village board was called Wednesday night to consider the plans for a sewer assessment to be spread over a period of twenty years.

The proposed system would follow along the present drainage ditch north of town eastward under the Rock Island tracks and a treating plant would be located in the woods about three miles from Tinley Park.

The estimated cost to the property owners will be 65c per front foot. It is understood that the property owners can pay the cost of the sewer along their respective properties in cash and save the interest or they can pay it on the special assessment plan at the rate of 3 cents per foot per year plus the interest for a period of twenty years.

Tinley Park has been emptying raw sewerage into the drainage ditch north of the village but four property owners along this drainage ditch have filed a petition with the village board asking that this practice be stopped as it is polluting the water in the ditch. The property owners signing the petition are: John Boeyer, Henry Vogt, Mr. Heindler and Anderson Brothers.

THE STORY

Jim Stanley, New York business man, orders his desk telephone taken to his home, intending to finish his dictation there. Rollo Waterman, his partner, comes in. Both are in love with Doris Colby. Stanley proposes to Doris to determine which shall first propose to her. Waterman wins. Nina Morgan, Waterman's secretary and mistress, has overheard his conversation with Stanley and resents Waterman's plan to desert her. Waterman says he is penniless and must make a rich marriage. He urges Nina to tell Doris that Stanley has wronged her (Nina). Doris admits to her father her interest in both men, but is unable to decide which to marry. Nina tells Doris her story, exacting a promise that Doris will not tell the source of her information. Doris is convinced of Stanley's duplicity and is broken-hearted, realizing that it is Stanley she loves. Waterman proposes and Doris accepts him. Stanley accepts the situation, and as a wedding present gives his share of the business to Waterman. He arranges with his secretary, Frank Wilson, to take charge of his other business interests. He is going to India. Doris tells Waterman part of Nina's story and he promises to "try" to find the girl. Frank Wilson, aware of Waterman's crookedness, leaves his employ. The latter begins to importune Doris for money. Bromfield, the gambler, is pressing Waterman for payment of gambling debts. At Waterman's urging Doris wears her magnificent diamond necklace to the opera. That night it disappears. Doris' father enlists Bromfield's aid in tracing the stones. Stanley returns to New York with an East Indian friend, Swami Ramanara. Doris realizes now that she loves him, and always has.

"Oh, quite, quite," he said, "and many thanks, old girl." As he spoke he took her hand, and tried to draw her to him. But she said quickly, "Please, don't do that. I don't like it."

"I was only trying to show you how much I appreciate it."

"Do it some other way, if you please."

He drew himself up stiffly. "As you like."

He turned to go, and she stopped him. "Rollin, one moment. What's the use of our going on like this?"

"Like this?"

"You know what I mean. You're not happy with me—I'm not happy with you. Why not end it?"

"You mean divorce?"

"Yes, that's what I mean."

Waterman was taken wholly unawares. He knew, of course, that he had imposed upon the generosity of his wife. He knew, too, that he had neglected her. He had taken her too much as a matter of course. But he was so self-centered that he had not realized that he was as yet in any danger that she would resent it. It now became suddenly clear to him that he had gone too far.

"Doris, old girl," he exclaimed, "you don't mean that! I know I haven't been as good a husband as I should, but I've been distracted and worried and bothered by so many things that perhaps I—"

"No," she said, "no, Rollin. That isn't it at all. If you really loved me, all these things would only have brought us closer together. As it is they have driven us further apart. From the very beginning I had my doubts, and now I know that it's all been a terrible mistake. I wish to end it. I've been thinking about it for weeks. And now I want your consent to an undefended divorce."

Strangely enough, though it had not been above an hour since Doris realized for the first time that she loved Jim Stanley, her present conversation was not consciously an outcome of that realization. That realization had, however, clarified his magic her growing point of view about her husband. Doris' realization that she loved Jim Stanley had made clear to her the intensity of the loathing that she felt for the life she was now leading with her husband. This aversion became almost intolerable as she waited for his answer.

Waterman tossed his cigarette into the grate and turned upon her, frowning. "I'll never consent," he said.

"Why not?"

"I don't believe in divorce. Also, despite certain obvious drawbacks, I like my home as it is, and I've no intention whatever of being separated from the society of my wife. And besides that—"

"Oh, please, please," she said. "Let's not discuss it any more just now. Try and look at it from my point of view. I'm sure that before long you'll see that I'm right."

"Not a chance," said he. He turned to go.

"By the way," said Doris, "Jim Stanley is back."

He turned sharply on his heel. "Ah-h!" he said.

"Why do you speak like that?"

But Waterman knew better than to express the thought that the mention of Jim Stanley's name had inspired, so he only asked, "When did he turn up?"

"He telephoned me this afternoon. He's coming here tonight."

"Oh, good, good. How is he?"

"Very well, he said."

Waterman was startled by this news. He had known, of course, that some day Stanley would return, but he had not expected it so soon, and he was not prepared. The announcement filled him with uneasiness, yet he swiftly reassured himself. Stanley's return could do him no harm. He was safe. In fact, it was probably a good thing. He was perfectly aware that Stanley's affection for him was genuine. He had pulled him out of many a hole in the past, and it was more than likely that he would come to his help now. Yes, yes—on the whole he was glad.

His wife had been regarding him with a reflective air. "You're glad that he is coming here?" she asked.

Instantly Waterman saw his mistake. He covered it. "Well, of course," he said, "it's going to be awkward, feeling as we do about him."

"I don't feel as I did about him."

"Eh?"

"No. I don't believe a word of that girl's story."

He was startled. Had Doris found out anything?

"May I ask why you have changed your mind about it?" she asked.

"I don't know, but I have."

"Well, I must say," said he, vastly relieved, "I've heard a lot about the illegality of the feminine mind, but this beats anything in my experience. What are you going to do about it?"

"I'm going to behave exactly as if I had never heard that story."

"But late, isn't it?"

"Yes," she said darkly, "it is—very late."

"Well, you can do as you like, I suppose."

"And as to that check," said Doris, "you'll find it on your desk tonight. Or, if you're not in a condition to notice it then, it will still be there in the morning."

"Are you insinuating that I'll be drunk?"

"You often are, aren't you?"

"Well," he said insolently, "there's a key in your bedroom door, isn't there?"

"The end of our romance," she murmured. "A key in my bedroom door."

He shrugged his shoulders and went out.

It will be seen that Doris had solved one of her problems—how to behave toward Jim. She was going to behave as if nothing had happened, and she was sure that nothing had happened—except that her life was spoiled.

Thus she sat and waited for the man she loved.

It was perhaps fortunate that when Stanley went that evening to see Doris he took the Swami Ramanara with him. He had a feeling that it might be just as well. He was not certain he could altogether trust himself.

She still sat before the fire where Waterman had left a few moments before, as he swiftly crossed the room and took her hand. "Doris—Doris—my dear Doris!" he cried, as his eyes devoured her. "This is wonderful!"

Speechless, she smiled up at him.

"Wonderful!" For the moment he had actually forgotten the Swami. Her eyes, wandering from his own across his shoulder, recalled him. "Oh, allow me, Doris—allow me to present the Swami Ramanara. Swami, this is Mrs. Waterman."

"Madame," said the Swami.

"The Swami and I," went on Stanley, "have been traveling companions all the way from the East. He has come to study America and to interest us in his own particular cult. He has interested me in it so deeply that my first thought was to put you in touch with him."

"That is very sweet of you, Jim."

"You see," continued Stanley, "the Swami is a mystic of uncommon powers. Many things dark to us are clear to him. I am sure, for example, that though it is not two minutes since he saw you, he knows quite well the kind of person you are. Yes—more than that. I am sure he knows whether you are happy or not, and why."

"Really?"

"Don't be alarmed," he laughed. "He speaks English quite well, though with some difficulty, but he has an astounding gift of reticence. You see, he speaks only when he has something of importance to say."

"How charming. If the rest of us were like that, what a lot of trouble it would save."

"Wouldn't it, though! But come now—how are you? Well, I hope—awfully well!"

"Oh, yes, yes—awfully."

"Splendid! And—happy?"

"Of course."

"Fine! You'd better be happy! I remember that about the last thing I said to Rolly was that he must make you awfully happy, because if he didn't he would have to answer to me."

"Doris, Doris, My Dear Doris!"

"I remember." But the blue eyes did not meet his gaze quite frankly. "Hm. Well, where is the old rascal? I want to see him—trot him out."

"He'll be here presently."

"Lord! But it's good to see you again. Your letters were not so numerous—just a line from Rollin once, but I don't remember getting any from you."

"No?"

"No—not one."

"That's strange, though perhaps it isn't. Whenever I send a letter across the world I always marvel if it is received. It seems a miracle. But how surprising to see you—we had no idea!"

He noted her avoidance but he passed it over and replied, "I didn't warn anyone—just woke up one morning homesick, for the first time, and started the same day. I haven't quite got my bearings yet, but it does seem as if the town is noisier than ever. I wish Rollin would hurry up. I can't stay but a moment. Lots to do. You see I'm going down to the country tomorrow to open up the place."

"Has it been occupied while you've been gone?"

"No—locked up just as it was. There'll be lots to do if I'm to be a going concern in a few days. But I want you and Rolly to spend a week-end with me pretty soon."

Bad Handwriting and Genius Often Linked

Are great writers necessarily afflicted with bad handwriting? A French paper puts the question. But there seems to be no hard and fast rule.

The writing of Victor Hugo, one of his publishers said once, "resembled a battle-died on a piece of paper." The typesetters who succeeded in deciphering Balzac were often desperate, and one is said to have gone crazy after hours of vain effort.

Robert Louis Stevenson was even worse. No printer ever could make out what he had written. Stevenson had to assist in copying what he had put down in the first place. Sydney Smith could not decipher his own handwriting after twenty-four hours.

On the other hand certain English writers like Arnold Bennett, Thomas Hardy and H. G. Wells, write legibly and even elegantly. But it should not be forgotten either that none of these three started out on a writing career in youth. Arnold Bennett was destined for the bar and served his time in a lawyer's office. Thomas Hardy began as an architect, and H. G. Wells started out in life as a dry goods clerk.

Epworth League

The society of the Methodist Episcopal church, the Epworth league, was organized at Cleveland, Ohio, in May, 1880. It is named for the birthplace of John Wesley.

Language Comparisons

There are 70,000 more words in the English language than in the French, German and Spanish languages combined.

"Why, of course."

"How about next Saturday?"

"I think, perhaps, if Rollin has nothing else."

"Good—next Saturday, then."

With this, Waterman stood in the doorway. Stanley made a rush and seized him by the shoulders. "Old man! Old man!—By George! This is great!" He shook him playfully before he took his hands.

"I'll say it is," said Waterman.

"How're you, old thing? Quite a surprise."

"Yes, yes—I didn't tell a soul I was coming. Oh, beg pardon, Swami—this is my old friend, Rollin Waterman. You've heard me speak a lot of him. Rollin, the Swami Ramanara."

"The what?" said Waterman.

"The Swami Ramanara," repeated Stanley.

"Oh, yes, yes, I'm sure." He waved a vague hand. "I know—Way down upon the Swami river—what?" He laughed noisily at his own joke. A moment's silence fell upon the group. Doris dropped her eyes. A faint flush mounted to her cheeks.

Stanley looked at his friend between narrowed lids. Only the Swami seemed indifferent. Swiftly Stanley took control.

"Well, Rollin, old fellow, it's fine to see you again—simply splendid. I've got a million things to tell you—but not now. I must be off again. The Swami has an appointment to meet some friends of mine and I've got to chaperon him. I'll look in at your office before long, if that's agreeable to you?"

"Sure, sure, come along."

Stanley turned to Doris, and took her hand again. "Good night," he said. "Remember—on Saturday."

She looked at him a little pitifully.

"Good night," she said, and to the Swami, "Good night, sir. I do hope you will come and see me again."

"Madame, I thank you. Good evening."

The Swami turned to Waterman.

"Sir," he said and bowed again.

"Sir to you," responded Waterman genially, swaying ever so slightly on his heels.

Stanley glanced uneasily from his friend's wife to his friend—but there was nothing to do. Unhappy, he departed.

Stanley passed an unhappy night. His first impulse was to get in touch with Wilson. Not, he reflected, that Wilson was likely to know anything that he wished to know, and yet he might. Still, ought he to talk to anyone about it? How far had this kind of thing gone?

Returning to his hotel in the taxi, the silence was presently broken by the Swami. "The lady has a sweet spirit," he said.

"No one knows that better than I," answered Stanley.

"She is not happy."

"I'm afraid not."

"Her life is not harmonious. There are discords."

"What do you mean?" But the Swami would say no more.

Stanley did not go to Waterman's office the next morning. He did not wish to see him at present. He found it difficult to pardon what he had seen the night before. In the past he had forgiven his friend for many things and now he tried to do him justice. "Idiotic of me," he thought, "to be so disturbed about such a trifle!" Yet disturbed he was and he decided to postpone his talk with Waterman. Instead of keeping that appointment, he telephoned to Wilson, got a motor, and after lunch started for the country.

The sun was warm, the air was still. The motor moved silently, smoothly, with effortless power, as if traveling through the picture of a dream. For a time Jim Stanley was at peace. He said little to Wilson, and asked no questions whatever. Wilson on his part respected his companion's mood. He, too, was happy—happier than he had been in a long time. He was content to be near the man he loved.

Stanley's place in the country had many characteristics of the English manor house. It was rather low, rambling and informal, comfortable and cheerful.

A winding private road, perhaps an eighth of a mile in length, brought the motor to the door. Jefferson, a middle-aged servant who had grown up in the Stanley family, and who had been the caretaker during Jim's absence, stood upon the doorstep to greet his employer.

The tour of the house which followed was brief. Stanley knew that with Jefferson in charge all had been well. Presently the trio reached the library.

"Jefferson," said Stanley, "I mean to occupy the house from now on, at least until spring. So you had better get things going at once. How much of a staff have we at present?"

"Just myself, the gardener, and the housekeeper, sir."

"You see, Mr. Stanley," explained Wilson, "when you went away so suddenly, you didn't give me any instructions: so I did what I thought you'd like and cut down expenses to the minimum."

Lesson for August 11

DANIEL AMONG THE LIONS

LESSON TEXT—Daniel 6:1-28.

GOLDEN TEXT—The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Daniel Is True to God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Daniel Is True to God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Meaning of True Courage.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Courage of Faith.

I. Daniel the Prime Minister of the Medo-Persian Empire (vv. 1-3).

Sterling worth brought him to the front and kept him there. The new king was keen to discern his worth and to give it recognition.

II. An Occasion Sought Against Daniel (vv. 4-9).

1. The reason for (v. 4). No doubt that which prompted this effort was envy and jealousy.

2. Failure of (v. 4).

Daniel's official record was blameless. They could not even find an error. Envy is still in the world. Those who excel in any line are sure to suffer in some way for their excellencies. The successful business man in relation to his competitors, the ranking pupil in school, the child of superior merit in the home, will be envied by the others. In politics many times those who honestly strive to do their duty are persecuted. Even in the church we find ministers are sometimes envious of their superiors.

3. The wicked plot (vv. 5-9).

They trumped up a charge on the ground of his foreign religion. They were not careful about their method, so their end was attained. In spite of Daniel's loyalty, the decree was signed by the king which would put him into the den of lions.

III. Daniel's Noble Confession (vv. 10-13).

Though Daniel knew that the wicked decree was signed, he knelt before God as usual. Note the silence of heroism. Weak men bluster; strong men have little to say.

1. He continued his usual habit (v. 10).

He knew that the civil law had absolutely nothing to do with his religion. God's law is first. Laws forbidding reading the Bible, praying, or meeting to worship God, have no authority over men.

2. Daniel reported to the king (vv. 11-13).

These wicked men watched to find out whether Daniel would pray before his God, and when they found that he continued his worship, they went to the king and reported that Daniel disregarded his decree.

IV. The Foolish Decree Executed (vv. 14-17).

1. The king displeased with himself (v. 14).

He labored till the going down of the sun to deliver Daniel, conscious that he had been entrapped.

2. The king helpless (v. 15).

The proud ruler found that he was a slave. To enact laws which change not is the height of folly.

3. Daniel cast into the den of lions (v. 16).

The king's parting word to Daniel was a poor, feeble excuse for his guilty conscience.

4. The double seal (v. 17).

This double sealing shows the king's purpose to abide by the unfortunate law.

V. Daniel Delivered (vv. 18-23).

1. Note the contrast between the night in the lion's den and the one in the palace. In the palace there was no sleep, no mirth. Daniel's quiet is as a picture of the safety and peace which are the portion of those who trust God and do His will.

2. The king's question in the morning (v. 20).

3. Daniel's answer (v. 22).

God's angel has done many wonderful works. The early Christians despised bonds, stripes and death.

4. Daniel delivered (v. 23).

No manner of hurt was found because he believed in his God.

VI. The Doom of His Accusers (v. 24).

They were cast into the den of lions and "or ever they came at the bottom of the den" their bones were broken in pieces. Daniel's enemies go into the same trap which they prepared for him.

VII. Darius' Decree (vv. 25-27).

Men were to tremble and fear before Daniel's God. As to whether Darius had a change of heart we do not know.

VIII. Daniel's Prosperity (v. 28).

Daniel goes higher into the kingdom and continues in his place of honor even though dynasties change.

In a Better World

A comfortable old age is the reward of a well-spent youth; therefore, instead of its introducing dismal and melancholy prospects of decay, it should give us hopes of eternal youth in a better world.—Palmer.

When a Cross Is Formed

When our will runs parallel with the will of God, no cross is formed; but when our will runs counter to God's will, a cross is formed which is heavy to be borne.—Aughay.

Director Rodney Brandon, of the state department of public welfare, has announced the appointment of Dr. Daniel T. Cloud, superintendent of the state school for the deaf at Olathe, Kan., as managing officer of the state school for the deaf at Jacksonville. Doctor Cloud, who will assume his duties August 17, succeeds Frank D. Whipp, who has been named superintendent of prisons. In a statement issued following the formal announcement Governor Emmerson said that the deaf of the state had urged that he appoint an educator with special training and experience in the teaching of the deaf. "What they want done at that school," said Governor Emmerson, "is what I want done and what I am sure the people of Illinois want done. I want it made the leading institution for the education of the deaf in the United States. I believe that this ideal requires a technically trained man. They are very scarce. Our own state has not offered the man who fills the requirements, and I have approved the recommendation of the state association of the deaf and the state department of public welfare, Dr. Daniel T. Cloud, superintendent of the State School for the Deaf at Olathe, Kan."

"We are going to make Springfield just as dry as possible during the state fair," is the declaration of Deputy Prohibition Administrator James A. Eaton.

Scarcely a month after the legislature adjourned, bound volumes of the laws enacted by the Fifty-sixth general assembly were put into the mails. The printed session laws were compiled by the index department of Secretary of State William J. Stratton's office. Lewis Vogel is head of the index department. The first mailings go to members of the legislature, jurists and all county officers. All other copies are sent on request only.

Governor Louis Emmerson has announced the appointments of James A. White, Murphysboro, as warden of Chester penitentiary and of C. J. Metzger, Shobonier, Fayette county, as superintendent of the Illinois state farm at Vandalia. The appointments were effective July 31.

Attorney General Carlstrom has ruled that barbers plying their trade on inter-state trains must first have a state license, secured from the department of trade and registration.

Walter Miller, who for a number of years has been chief clerk of the automobile department of the secretary of state's office, is in charge of the administration of the oil inspection law, which went into effect simultaneously with the gasoline tax law on August 1. Under this act all authority over oil inspection passes from the cities to the state department of trade and commerce.

The department of public works and buildings may legally make a refund under the state aid law to Kane county to repay it for building sections of Route 22 through Geneva and Batavia, since these sections connected with or completed a state aid road when originally built. Attorney General Carlstrom has advised highway officials.

Beardstown held a three-day celebration to mark the anniversary of her one hundredth year. A pageant, employing a cast of 500, and depicting every historic event of importance to Beardstown, was given each evening of the celebration. As one episode, an experienced cast from Chandlerville presented the famous "Dui" Armstrong murder trial in which Abraham Lincoln successfully defended the accused.

Macoupin county's and Carlinville's one hundredth anniversary celebration opened with the unveiling of a tablet on the place where Abraham Lincoln stood to give a campaign address when he ran for President of the United States. The monument on which this bronze tablet is placed is a boulder weighing 7,000 pounds, which was unearthed in the new state route built just west of Wilsonville in 1928.

Governor Emmerson has announced the resignation of F. E. O'Bryant, assistant director of trade and commerce, which took effect July 31. Mr. O'Bryant's home is at Ashley.

More than half of the men killed in Illinois mines are injured fatally by falls of the roof or sides underground, according to the state's 1928 annual report. Out of 139 deaths in the year, falls cost the lives of 72.

More than 2,500 farmers of the state during 1928 made use of the simple farm accounting service developed by the farm organization and management department of the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois. R. R. Hurdson, extension specialist of the department, reports.

Dr. H. N. Hedlin, Kewanee, a member of the Illinois Tuberculosis association, was in Springfield recently and was informed of his appointment as one of the lecturers at the health show at the state fair.

Interest in state circles centers in the rebuilding plans for the Lincoln monument at Springfield. Plans and specifications for the work have been completed and bids will be asked within the next 10 days.

Damage to the shaft of the monument through freezing has made it necessary to make extensive repairs on this part of the monument. When the matter was called to the attention of Governor Louis L. Emmerson, he expressed the wish that the work go even farther and that the interior of the monument be rebuilt to give the tomb a setting fitting to the memory of the Great Emancipator.

The sarcophagus will be rebuilt and the interior of the tomb altered so that visitors may view the burial place of the martyred president without the necessity of first entering the reception room and then going outside and peering through a small iron door.

The state has received many letters from prominent men and women of the nation expressing congratulations at the decision to reconstruct the monument into a more suitable resting place for Illinois' Civil war President.

Homer J. Tice, president of the Illinois State fair advisory board, addressing the Springfield Lions' club at a recent mid-day luncheon, urged co-operation on the part of industry and commerce to bring about agricultural advancement. He spoke particularly of the desirability of team work in conducting successfully the Illinois State fair. "It is the policy of this administration," he stated, "to conduct this enterprise along such lines as will best serve to build a better agricultural Illinois. The annual exposition 'of, by and for the people' can attain its worthy objective only through the united efforts of the ones who are the most concerned—the families on the farms of Illinois."

Robert L. Conn, deputy clerk of the Supreme court, spoke at a recent meeting of the Springfield rotary on court practice and told of a number of cases brought to the Supreme court, including some of many years ago dealing with slavery.

The division of dairy husbandry of the Illinois department of agriculture, now under the direct supervision of Frank Channing, of Elgin, is making preparations for an educational exhibit to be conducted in the dairy products exposition building during the Illinois State fair, August 17-24. The exhibit will feature two concrete dairy farm buildings—a model dairy barn and a milk house. Both buildings will be one-fourth actual size, and will show the details of construction so clearly that any handy farm mechanic can reproduce them on his farm.

The records of the auditor of Public Accounts, Oscar Nelson, show that $110,732,419.86 was ordered into the state treasury during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929. Of this amount $16,549,068.82 was received on account of direct property taxes. Other important sources of revenue were bonds sold, inheritances, corporations, insurance companies, auto licenses, etc.

When the state gas tax law and the state oil inspection law became effective August 1, only three measures passed by the Fifty-sixth general assembly and approved by the governor remained unacted. These are the conservation bond issue bill and the women on juries bills, subject to approval of the voters at the next general election, and the pneumatic tire bill, effective after July 1, 1931.

One hundred and two girls have enrolled for the Illinois State Fair school of domestic science, to open in the Women's building on the grounds August 9 and to continue until the close of the exposition, August 24. Dr. Andy Hall, director of the state department of public health, has detailed Dr. Elizabeth Ball as resident physician for the school. Mrs. Anita Shamel, who will superintend the institution, states, "The plans for the 1929 girls' school are broader than for former sessions in that they embrace attention to physical as well as mental and social development."

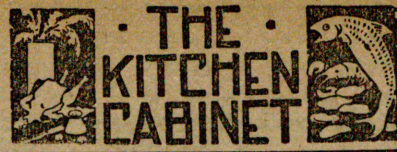

The Egyptian Club of Illinois, an association of former residents of southern Illinois, will hold its annual picnic in Washington park, Springfield, on September 1.

Frank T. Sheets, chief highway engineer, has left Springfield for Rio de Janeiro, where he will attend the Pan-American Road conference by appointment of President Hoover.

Although not commonly thought of as an oil producing state Illinois has 13,547 oil and gas wells, employing 88 operators and 1,500 men, according to the annual report of Director A. D. Lewis of the state department of mines and minerals. These wells produced a total of 5,225,515 barrels of oil and 1,973,159 cubic feet of gas.

Building operations of the state of Illinois are furnishing work to hundreds of men in different sections of the state. C. Herrick Hammond, state supervising architect, reports that the present month sees the state at the height of an especially busy building year.

The weekly health report issued by Dr. Andy Hall, director of the state department of health, on July 29, showed a decrease in contagious diseases in the down state. There were 318 cases of whooping cough.

MIDSUMMER DISHES

On a hot day nothing is more refreshing than an ice of some sort and pineapple is especially enjoyed by all.

Pineapple Ice.—Shred or cut fine one-half cupful of juicy pineapple. Cook one cupful of sugar with one-half cupful of water until it forms a thread.

Pour this over the pineapple and let it stand until it cools. Add enough lemon juice to bring out the flavor of the pineapple. Beat the whites of two eggs and fold into the pineapple and sirup mixture. Chill a glass jar, pour this preparation into it, top with buttered paper and put on top and clamp on the cover. Pack in ice and salt well mixed for two hours. Work quickly to mix the egg so that the fruit and sirup will not separate. It may be made in large quantity and frozen in the freezer, adding the egg whites when partly frozen.

Minted Pineapple Punch.—Take one-half of a ripe juicy pineapple and one pint of strawberries sugared to taste, and a sprinkling of mint. Shred the pineapple and sprinkle sugar all over it. Wash and drain, mash the hulled strawberries or put them through a sieve. Pour this puree over the pineapple. The mint should be fresh and well washed; dry and chop; two leaves for a serving will be enough. Chill and serve in glasses.

Cauliflower With Corn Flakes.—Cook the cauliflower until tender, after breaking it up into flowerettes. Serve with melted butter and sprinkle generously with crisp cornflakes. Serve as a luncheon dish on a platter or with the dinner menu.

Coffee Praline Sundae.—Place a medium-sized scoopful of coffee ice cream in each sundae glass, pour over two tablespoonfuls of coffee sirup and top with whipped cream sprinkled thickly with praline powder.

For the coffee sirup make extra strong coffee—one and three-fourths quarts of water to a pound of coffee, add three and one-half pounds of sugar and boil for three minutes. Bottle for use.

To make the praline powder place one-half cupful of sugar with one-half cupful of blanched almonds in a small frying pan. Stir until the sugar is liquified or caramelized. Let the mixture become stiff, then crush it with a rolling pin to a coarse powder.

Good Things to Eat. When the days are hot and you do not feel like eating a meal, yet you need stimulation for your tired body, try a nourishing drink, such as:

Fruit Egg Nog.—Beat the white of an egg until stiff, add gradually one-half tablespoonful of sugar and one-eighth teaspoonful of salt and one-half of the juice of an orange. To the beaten yolk add another half-tablespoonful of sugar, the juice of half a lemon and the rest of the orange juice. Put some chilled ice in a glass, pour in the first mixture, then gently stir in the second, and serve at once.

Egg Milk Shake.—Beat three eggs until light, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla, one fourth teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of nutmeg and cinnamon and three cupfuls of milk. Stir until dissolved, then beat well. Serve cold.

French Caramel Custard.—Take four eggs, six tablespoonfuls of sugar, one cupful of milk. Separate the egg yolks and whites, beat well. Add four tablespoonfuls of sugar to the yolks. Make a caramel with two tablespoonfuls of sugar melted and browned and a little boiling water to dissolve; one-half cupful is sufficient. Pour this into a mold and add the beaten whites, milk and yolks. Bake in a pan of water until firm. Turn out on a platter after it is well chilled and serve with or without sauce.

It is surprising how much more flavorful many of our foods are made by the addition of a bit of sugar. Our best meat cooks add a pinch or more to all roasts and stews of meat; a bit added to almost all vegetables is an improvement, especially corn, peas and beans, which sometimes lack sweetness.

Banana Salad.—Cut out a section on the concave side of bananas to make a boat. Fill with the chopped banana, a bit of pineapple, and orange all seasoned well with french dressing. Lay on a bed of lettuce and sprinkle with paprika. Garnish with berries or cherries.

Paprika Beets.—Cook half a dozen beets in boiling water to which half a tablespoonful of sugar has been added. Chill in cold water and slip off the skins. Slice, or if small, cut into halves or quarters. Pour over two tablespoonfuls of butter to which one-half teaspoonful of sugar and one-half teaspoonful each of paprika and salt have been added. Serve piping hot.

Electricity Great Aid to Market Gardeners

Electrical gardening has proved to be a practical and economically profitable occupation in Sweden. Although the recent winter was one of the hardest in history, such garden products as "home-grown raspberries," cucumbers and the most delicate of garden flowers have been available at all times. In the gardens near Hamlingby, a small town north of Stockholm, 10,000 tulips, 1,500 lilies-of-the-valley, and 1,500 hyacinths were raised during January, all in ground electrically heated and under the artificial light of electric lamps. The operating expense of the electrical system was found to be negligible. The most difficult phase of the work is found in supplying various types of plants with the particular variety of light which they require, the lamps suitable for roses, for example, being unsuited to the development of carnations. There are 300 so-called "electro-horticultural" stations in Sweden, all of which are carrying on experiments in the artificial production of flowers and vegetables.

Billy Wouldn't Stand for Leaving Out Nurse

Mrs. E—had to go to a hospital for treatment and while there her kiddies were in the charge of some one who granted them more than the usual privileges. The new experiences brought a new vocabulary to the youngsters.

When mother returned she told the children of the wonderful nurse who so kindly cared for her, and said: "I want you always to include Miss Blank (the nurse) when you say your evening prayers."

This they did religiously. One night the mother had a prominent clergyman for a guest of the home and he was asked to conduct the family worship.

On rising from their knees, little four-year-old Billy, noticing a serious omission in the service, rushed over to the minister and using his newly acquired words, said: "You! You did not pray for the nurse."

The Devil to Pay

"Woman has come into her own," he said, "but Henry Ward Beecher's dictum about marriage is as true today as it was a generation ago. Beecher's dictum, you know, was this:

"A marriage between a young man and a young woman is made by God, between an old man and a young woman it is made by the world, between an old woman and a young man it is made by the devil."—Detroit Free Press.

Will County Fair Notes

The Will County fair will be held in Peotone Sept. 4, 5 and 6. It will be the 26th fair held by the association and it promises to be the greatest of all.

The management this year has cut loose from the old worn-out traditions and will offer amusement attractions never before seen at a fair. Among these are a public wedding in front of the grand stand, a Bathing Beauty contest, fashion shows, an animal show, plays and other features.

Three bands will be on the grounds every day. Two of these—Wade Bros. band and the Trianon Woman's band—will be on the grounds all three days.

The famous Joliet Township High School band of ninety pieces will give two concerts on the first day. Miss Delander (Miss America of 1927), the sponsor of the band will be with the boys.

Wade Bros. carnival company with four rides more than ever offered at any fair, ten shows, 25 concessions and its own band will make a monster fair in itself.

A feature which will please the baseball fans will be a game between an all-star nine and the well known House of David team of Benton Harbor, Michigan.

So far as the amusements are concerned the fair's motto this year is: "The Will County Fair—We're living the age. We're giving the people what they want—Whoopie!"

Two new buildings have been provided for exhibits and the main building has been converted into an immense exposition building in which leading merchants will display the finest of goods.

Big Livestock Competition At Illinois State Fair

The competition in all livestock classes at the Illinois State Fair, August 17-24 will be the keenest in the history of the state's exposition, according to the reports received by Clarence F. Buck, director of agriculture.

Entry blanks mailed out with state fair premium lists are being returned filled out with lists of the highest class livestock men in 1929 state fair.

When the first few hundred copies of the premium list came off the press, they mailed exhibitors on record living in the more distant states in order that they might receive their copies as soon as Illinois residents. Within a few days, entry blanks began to trickle in to the state fair office until in the last few days the list of entries has become especially heavy.

An abundance of entries in all the competitive departments creates keen competition, and gives the state fair visitors an opportunity to inspect the nation's finest specimens in the sundry branches listed in the catalog. In addition to the classes that are open to the world, there are a number of departments exclusively for Illinois producers. This feature of the premium offering, a comparatively recent development, is growing in popularity as it gives farmers of the state a chance to compete with one another without meeting competition from the professional exhibitors who bring the nation's best to Illinois during the fair.

For the automobile races, to be conducted on the opening and closing dates, August 17th and 24th, there is a formidable array of driving talent listed from the auto racing centers of the entire Central west.

The educational features—the domestic science school, the boy's school, high school agricultural class display, the junior department and the competition between schools' displays of students exhibits, all will have a full quota of entries, judging from the early applications.

The entertainment features under contract this year, will provide a wider range of acts than usual. A few of the performers who have proved their popularity with the state fair audiences, will play return engagements by request. Billy Loretta and The Hudson Wonders are among the ones that will be back again. "Billy" will be remembered as the clown cop and "announcer extraordinary," who kept the crowds convulsed with laughter last year. The Hudson Wonders are the little girls that did eccentric and acrobatic dancing so successfully last season.

From the most important features, from a view point of agricultural advancement and livestock breed improvement, on down thru the lists, even unto the fun in Happy Hollow, the details of the eight day program are being worked out so thoroughly that a thorough, well balanced exposition is in prospect.

Nor has the educational side of the fair been slighted. The list of premiums offered for live stock, poultry, farm and household products, needlework, art and school work is larger than ever before. The cash premiums are generous and well worth striving for. Catalogues may be had by dropping a card to the secretary, F. H. Carstens, Peotone, Illinois.

A new hard road 1,000 feet in length connects the main gate of the fair with Route No. 49, the Kankakee-Chicago super highway. The Illinois Central is contributing its share to the success of the fair by making an extra wide crossing on the road leading to the main gate.

THE BELL SYSTEM IS BUILDING AHEAD OF THE GROWTH OF THE COUNTRY

This is the telephone's job and goal

The United States is developing a new civilization. The telephone is an indispensable element in it. The Bell System is building ahead of the growth of this civilization. In 1929 the telephone budget for land and buildings is 54 million dollars, with new buildings rising in 200 cities. New equipment for central offices will cost 142 millions; exchange lines 120 millions; toll lines 119 millions.

The Bell System's total expenditure for plant and service improvements this year will be 559 million dollars.

This outlay is required because the telephone is a universal servant of this democracy. Business uses it to create more prosperity. Homes use it for comfort and protection, for keeping friendships alive and enriching life. Its general use enables each personality to extend itself without regard to distance.

The telephone ideal is that anyone, anywhere, shall be able to talk quickly and at reasonable cost with anyone, anywhere else. There is no standing still in the Bell System.

stated "I need not urge upon you the fundamental importance of this undertaking - The greatest asset of a race is its children, that their bodily strength and development should prepare them to receive the heritage which each generation must bequeath to the next."

REMEDY FOR CANCER IS SAID TO BE REMOTE

A far-seeing, long-time program, amply financed, must be the foundation for initiating any Federal investigation seeking a cure for cancer from which medical science seems about as far today as when research on the subject started over 15 years ago. This is the opinion of medical consultants communicated with by a sub-committee on the Senate Commerce Committee. Communications received from John Hopkins University, Columbia University, Cornell University, Yale University and other sources, all tend to emphasize the extreme difficulty of the problem of finding a cure and to discourage much hope for early success, even though the Government should undertake to enter this field.

$1250 OFFERED FOR BEST JAR OF CANNED FOOD IN NATIONAL CANNING CONTEST

Just how good at Canning are Mokena women and girls?

This question suggested itself today from an announcement in Chicago of a National Canning Contest to find the best jar of canned fruit, vegetables or meat in the country. Twelve hundred and fifty dollars ($1250) in cold cash awaits the woman or girl in the United States whose entry is selected as the best jar of canned food entered in the contest.

The contest, which is sponsored by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, seeks to acquaint more housewives with the economy and healthfulness of home canned foods. For years the U. S. department of agriculture and home demonstration agents throughout the country have worked for increased production of native canned foods. It is to further this excellent idea and at the same time to help absorb the threat of surplus of farm products in many sections, that this canning project was conceived.

Two hundred and twenty-two cash prizes, totaling $5,825, will be disbursed to the winners in the contest, which has three major divisions: fruit, vegetables and meat. The best entry in each division will be awarded $250, and one of these will also receive the thousand dollar sweepstakes prize, thus bringing the total cash prize for the best jar of canned food in the contest to $1,250. Second prize in each of the three divisions will be $200, third prize $100, and fourth prize, $50. There will also be five prizes of $25 each, ten prizes of $10 each and fifty prizes of $5 each. In addition, a thousand dollars in cash will be awarded to the home demonstration agent whose county sends in the greatest number of entries, $500 to the agent whose county has the next largest number, and $100 to the agent whose county sends in the third largest number of entries. A number of lesser merchandise prizes are also offered.

Contest Closes October 15. According to the rules, the contest is open to every woman and girl in the United States. There are no restrictions as to the nature of the food sent; any fruit, vegetable or meat, whether home grown or purchased, is acceptable. Contestants may enter one, two or all three divisions. Entries, regardless of when canned, must not be sent in prior to August 15 nor later than October 1, which is the closing date of the contest. No entries will be returned, but instead these will be sent, with the name and address of the contestant, to an orphanage, hospital, infirmary or other charitable institution to be selected by the Foundation.

Specimens of canned fruits and vegetables in the contest will be judged on the basis of clearness, color, pack, neatness, flavor and texture. Meat specimens will be judged in their relation to pack, neatness, texture and flavor. There will be three judges, to be selected by the Foundation from a list of outstanding authorities on home economics, domestic science, and canned food. Their decision will be made known just as soon as possible after October 1.

Gives Hints on Canning.

"Any method of canning may be used for this contest", announces Anne Williams, director of the contest. "The use of a steam pressure cooker, however, is highly recommended by canning experts and by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, especially in canning meats. Not only does this method of canning save time and fuel and assure absolutely, sterility and preservation, but food canned under pressure retains all its natural flavor and texture, which are vital points in any canning contest."

That the judging may be thoroughly impartial and the display of canned samples absolutely uniform, contestants are required to submit their entries in standard glass jars of the quart size. All contestants will be furnished with one Ball mason jar and carton for sending in a canned article, but those making entries in more than one division are expected to supply their own jars and shipping cartons. The sample jar and prize entry labels for use in submitting entries may be secured without cost by communicating with the headquarters of the National Canning Contest, 925 S. Homan Ave., Chicago, Illinois.

The Things We Say and the Things We Do

VOGUE FOR BROWN PREVAILS; ANGORA HATS THE LATEST

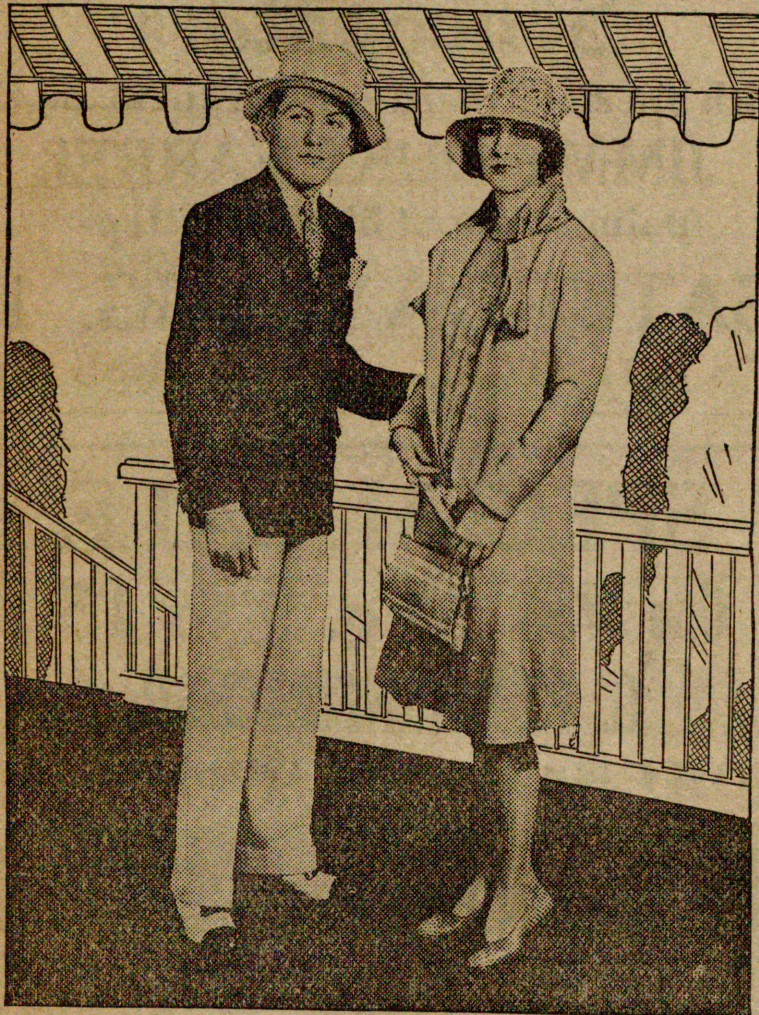

WITH both men and women brown is proving an outstanding color choice. This triumph of brown is apparent not only in the Paris style picture, but all the European water resorts are recording the prestige of brown. What's more, it's vogue for autumn is promised on a crescendo scale.

The young man in the picture is wearing the last word in summer attire, consisting of brown flannel sports jacket with brass buttons, white flannel trousers, brown and orange foul-brown shoes, a hat of brown exotic straw and she carries a brown handkerchief, also handbag.

Those cunning white angora toques or the angora-embroidered straws and felts with more or less brims—what zest they are adding to midseason millinery!

It did not take long for women who appreciate chic and charm, to sense the attractiveness of a costume which tops a sleeveless white or gaily colorful summery frock with a dainty soft-as-down angora head-piece. Which and tie, white and brown kid sports shoes, and a panama hat.

The young woman expresses the latest in a coat of pale yellow flannel, with blue crushed velvet scarf, posed over a two-piece frock with pale yellow flannel skirt and heavy lace blouse, beige kid shoes trimmed with reptile and a hat of linenlike straw. Which all goes to show that kid shoes, flannel suits and straw hats have "it," but no sex. They are as masculine as masculine on the man as they are as feminine as feminine on the woman.

Peach-beige with brown is quite the newest color note for sports ensembles. Then, too, a just-received Paris cable reports flesh and brown in gowns and wraps as seen at smartest evening functions.

Brown chiffon for the evening frock is acclaimed by the house of Worth in a charming model which has a long, quite full, straight skirt (note the word "long," for skirts are assuredly longer). The low décolletage flutters a plaited capelet. The back panels which are artfully adjusted form a short train. Yes, trains "are in" again, rather timidly to be sure—mere suggestions yet they add wonderful grace.

A coffee brown chiffon frock, also by Worth, is made on tailored lines, with fagoting its only trimming. The accounts for the midseason "rush" for either a most flattering little toque draped of angora scarfing or a felt or a straw which boasts at least a hand-worked touch of the soft fluffy yarn.

The magic touch of angora has given to each of the pretty models in the lower picture a convincing style prestige. First in the group is a shapely cloche of novelty black straw which accents the vogue for black-and-white millinery in that it boasts striking motifs worked in snowy angora. A glittering crystal pin is thrust through at one side.

Centered at the top is a very charming little hat carried out in white angora and fine natural-colored smooth straw. The straw forms into a fancy strap which is embroidered with angora and buttoned with rhinestone balls.

Both crown and brim of the modish cloche to the right are worked with angora yarn, making an all-over effect. Little wheels of narrow navy grosgrain ribbon matches the underbrim which is formed row and row of the same.

Last is an extremely handsome hat with a brim, the larger shapes having come decidedly into the foreground this season. This one is an exquisite natural colored bakou, the back brim cut so as to emphasize width at the sports costumes of Worth, which have brown coats, number among the greatest successes of the season.

White flannels and other sleeveless dresses of white pique crepe or shantung are belted and scarfed with brown or orange. Topped with brown jersey coats these ensembles are very smart, indeed.

The niftiest tailored suits emphasize the importance of brown, too, those in chocolate brown being especially good. The truly fashion-wise works out a clever study in brown supplementing her strictly tailored brown short jacket and skirt with a blouse in tangerine or eggshell tint. With this she wears a brown suede belt, brown necktie, suntan hose, sides. The embroidered rings are done in white angora and white floss.

Many women are buying felt or straw shapes to their liking and themselves embroidering them with angora. One can secure the angora in almost any of the new colors as well as white. For instance, a gray felt with hand stitchery in perfectly matching gray stands for last-minute vogue. One of the very thin new linenlike navy straws would be handsome embroidered in flame, char-treuse or tangerine angora.

Angora berets for the younger girls are also a proud boast of the milliner.

Silo Profit Is in the Feeding

Dairy Farms and Live Stock
Feeders Declare Silage
Is Essential.

The proof of the silo profit is in the feeding. Wisconsin has proved the economy of this. If the value of silage in the live stock ration was known all over this land as well as it is in this state, where there is one silo to every 30 head of cattle, there would be 2,000,000 silos built in America in the next three years. All the evidence is in favor of this feed as a profit-bringing, milk-making and beef-building ration.

Corn silage can be grown and put into the silo for less than $6 a ton. Some reports set the cost figures as low as $5 a ton. This is crediting the corn as being worth about 94 cents a bushel.

Value of Silage.

Experts in different states claim that when butterfat is selling for 45 cents a pound, corn silage will bring the dairy farmer $10 per ton, and when fat steers are selling from $9 to $10 per hundredweight, corn silage is worth from $7 to $8 per ton. The owner of a silo with a fair yield of crop can receive a value from his corn made into silage of $70 to $80 an acre when fed to steers and $100 when fed to good dairy cows.

It has been proved that, with dairy animals, the feeding of silage saves from 8 to 15 cents on the cost of producing a pound of butter, and from 30 to 50 cents on producing 100 pounds of milk. For beef production the saving produced by silage is about $1 per 100 pounds of gain.

It is true that the horse is decreasing in numbers, but the cattle census must be kept up and will be kept up by the steady demand for milk and meat. It is probable that the values placed upon silage as given above will be considered too low before next spring.

Make Study of Silo.

It is just the time to make a study of their value and economy, watching the feeding through the winter and letting the facts stand as proof that thousands more should be set to work making money for stockmen. Experiment stations, dairy farms and live stock feeders all over the United States have proved that the silo is of highest importance in the economic production of stock and stock products. The half-million progressive stock farmers who are using silos find them indispensable. For many years we have urged the trial of the silo as a money maker.—Wisconsin Agricul-turist.

Grafting Relationships Not Clearly Explained

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the facts of plant life on which scientists would like to have more complete information deals with the relationship of plants within which grafting may be done. As Guy E. Yerkes, of the United States Department of Agriculture, remarked recently, the limits of this botanical relationship are not clearly defined. "Varieties within the same species," he said, "may be expected to unite; for example, all varieties of European pear will grow on French pear stock. Often different species within the same genus will make satisfactory unions. As an example, most botanical species of apple (Malus) will grow on each other. On the other hand, cherry will not unite with peach, although both are placed by many botanists in the genus Prunus. In many cases, plants more distantly related may be grafted and will grow, as hawthorn upon apple and firethorn upon mountain ash. The citrus fruits are related closely enough so that it is by no means uncommon to see a single stock, which has been grafted, producing different fruits on different limbs, lemons on one, oranges on another, and perhaps grapefruit and tangerines as well."

Fall Plowing Will Make Enlarged Crop of Oats

On average land oats will usually make a larger crop when the ground is plowed shallow in the fall. One is usually less likely to get a good stand of clover when it is sown in oats on fall or spring plowed ground unless the land has been disked and rolled to get it into a firm seedbed, than when the land was only disked for oats. The surface of the plowed ground will dry out deeper than on disked land and the clover seed is not so likely to have as good moisture conditions for germinating on plowed ground as on disked ground. A good rolling will overcome this tendency to a large extent however.

Plant Food Will Make Crops More Pleasing

On soils that are full of plant food, the crops will grow quickly and more succulent. The individual plants will grow larger and freer from fiber and thus be much more desirable for table use. This applies more particularly to salad crops like cabbage, celery, spinach, etc. The very best kind of root crops will be produced on such soils. The radishes thus grown will be less peppery and free from fiber—the kind that fairly snap when you bite one of them. Beets and carrots, too, will be tender because they have made a quick growth.

CHOICE OF MILLIONS because it's such a pleasant way to avoid constipation

THERE'S no real reason why a breakfast food that keeps you regular shouldn't be appetizing too. Food should be appetizing if the digestive juices are to do their work.

That is probably why Post's Bran Flakes appears every morning on millions of breakfast tables. People know the effectiveness of its bran content in encouraging regular habits. And they genuinely like its crisp, nutty flavor. It's such a pleasant way of keeping fit.

Try it with fruit, in muffins or bread—the crisp flavor always adds. And for effectiveness eat it regularly. Call up your grocer and begin tomorrow.

Good Old Hickory
The making of hickory handles, an activity of the wood-turning industry, is carried on mostly in the southern Appalachians and the lower Mississippi basin. Hickory is a native of the United States, and the wood is more suitable than others for the handles of tools. Approximately 8,000,000 wood shafts will be used this year, requiring a total of 27,000,000 board feet of lumber.

TINLEY TOWN TOPICS

The recent dance held at the Tinley Park hall by the Triangle club was a great success. The hall decorated in the many banners, placards and "expressions" of present day college life harmonized exceedingly well with the "Collegiate" orchestra which furnished the entertainment for the evening. It showed that when these young folks set their mind on a thing they pull and plug until accomplished.

The Honorable Mayor, William Funk and wife have returned from a pleasant motor and fishing trip thru northern Wisconsin. He says, fishing could be better. (The better half in all probability would not substantiate or vouch for fish stories on their return.)

The Boy Scouts of Troop 1, Tinley Park, are bound to be well equipped, regardless of cost and work required to accomplish this. They have not only done a useful deed, but have also gained financially by gathering all the old papers, magazines, etc., from the various householders in the village and sold same to purchase new equipment to further Scout craft activities.

The Rev. and Mrs. Fandry of Chicago are reported to be "homeward bound from Europe." They are reported to have visited many points of interest while in "the old country." Mrs. Fandry it will be remembered was formerly Miss Irma Buddenhagen of Tinley Park, daughter of Rev. Albert Buddenhagen, pastor of the Tinley Park Zion Lutheran Church.

The American Legion Post 615, of Tinley Park are sponsoring a "Social Dance and Entertainment" for the benefit of Tinley Park Scout Troop 1 on August 17th at the Community Hall.

If Mr. John Werth, one of the new members of the Lions Club does not report for the "Baseball game" at the next meeting, the manager or team captain will in all probability locate him huddling close to the new Howard "9 in Line" radio, which he purchased, trying to locate the DX stations of the far corners of the earth.

There seemed to have been considerable interest taken in village matters, as an exceptionally large attendance was present at the last regular meeting Monday, August 5. The Village fathers are contemplating the building of a bridge over the drainage ditch near the Kott home.

Some discussion also arose in regard to the delinquent vehicle tax and dog licenses.

The item of licensing contractors of building was discussed and set aside until they could see what other towns of like population were doing.

A notice of odor of the drainage ditch was brought to the attention of the board. The notice was signed by various dwellers east of the village.

The question of police protection was also brought up. The board decided to go without the services of a motor cycle policeman until the next meeting and see how things develop.

inning. Kohl, Paddy Benson and Homerding fanned, but we came back and made it 3 and 2 in the fifth. Jöhler threw out Ollie Benson, Art Benson walked, Sorenson doubled to left and Benson scored, Knudson walked, McGovney sacrificed to Donnelly, Sorenson going to third and Knudson to second, but Beard threw out Hohenstein.

We kind of got bawled up in the sixth. Hoefer struck out, but Donnelly went to first on a walk and scored second. Beard walked, Woods was safe on a grounder to Sorenson who tossed to Kohl, covering second to get Beard, but everybody was safe and the sacks were loaded with only one down. Sorenson threw out Koliska, but Beard and Woods scored on Benson's double to left. Thomas fled to Homerding.

We made it 6 to 5 in the seventh. With two down, Sorenson tripled to right and scored on Knudson's grounder past second. McGovney singled and followed Knudson across the pan on Hohenstein's buzzer thru Jöhler.

In the eighth we got four more runs, even tho our old friend Jöhler whiffed three of us. This guy, white from Lockport, who took Paddy Benson's place behind the bat in the last three innings because Paddy got a tip foul on the knee, lifted a Texas leaguer back of second and went to second on Homerding's bunt to Jöhler, who turned around and threw too high to get his man. Marquez jumped and knocked down the throw. White stole third. Jöhler took a nap for a minute and then suddenly wheeled around and threw to first to get Homerding, but Homerding was on his way down to second. Everybody safe. White scored when Jöhler booted Art Benson's infield hit, and Homerding went to third, scoring on the throw to second to get Art Benson. Sorenson singled for his fourth hit, Knudson hit to center, and McGovney made two on a slow roller to left, but Hohenstein and Kohl fanned.

Thomas opened the ninth with a wallop to center. Homerding threw out Marquez. Jöhler was safe on Sorenson's error, and Thomas and Jöhler scored on Hoefer's liner to center when Art Benson fell down trying to get under the drive, but Paddy Homerding got tough and struck out Donnelly and Beard.

On August 11 the West Parks, of Joliet, will furnish the entertainment, and they are strong, too. They beat Manhattan 5 to 4 in eleven innings two weeks ago. Better not miss this game. It should be a regular big league game, and for only a quarter, women and children free. Bring the whole family and all your other enemies.

Sentiment Divided On Mokena Sewer

The assessed valuation of Mokena is $110,000 and that the sewer system will cost better than $60,000 which together with the new school which costs over $43,000 the two projects total more than the total assessed valuation of the village and that the cost of the improvement will exceed the benefits.

The opponents declare that the cost of the proposed improvement will be a burden for years to come. They favor a sewer system but on a less expensive scale. They declare Mokena is running into the same kind of a special assessment burden that some of the Cook County towns are now in where the taxes and assessments are so high that many of the small property owners are losing their homes as they are unable to meet these burdens. The same it is said would hold good in Mokena.

The whole matter is now up to the people of Mokena to say what they want at the public hearing to be held on Friday evening, August 16 at 7 p. m. standard time on the sewer proposition.

Bethard's Takes Pete's Place

Peter Michaelson has leased his filling station and refreshment stand south of Mokena on Wolf Road to R. E. Bethard's local garage man. Mr. Bethard has named the place "The Green Gables" and has placed Alfred Heiman in charge of it.

Chief Geo. Smith Of Tinley Resigns

Chief of Police George Smith of Tinley Park has resigned and taken up a position as motorcycle policeman at Phoenix the past week. Report has it that he made over thirty speed case arrests from Saturday to Sunday at Phoenix and that in nearly all instances the speeders were doing fifty miles and better.

The Tinley Park council has made no appointment as yet but will probably fill the vacancy at the end of the month. At present all the village officials are vested with police power and can take care of any emergency.

Chief Smith had many friends here who are sorry that he left. Chief Smith was noted for his fearlessness and his quick response to any trouble calls.

Dogs and Rabbits Basis of Claim Against Tinley

A rather peculiar case which monopolized the most of the evening came before the Tinley Park village board meeting Monday night in which three dogs and some rabbits were the basis of a claim for damages against the village.

According to the story, Arthur Keuch brought complaint that three dogs had killed a number of rabbits on his place recently and he valued these rabbits at $8 and filed a claim for this amount against the village.

The village officials contended that if these dogs were licensed dogs the village might be liable but Mr. Keuch would have to prove whose dogs they were and as he was not sure of this, the claim was not allowed.

ORLAND PARK

The Orland Park ball team will play Blue Island at Blue Island on Sunday, August 11th. Orland won last Sunday from Chicago Heights Sportsmen's Athletic club 6 to 4.

Mrs. Arthur Beagley, and Mrs. Peter Heimes won them.

Nellie Dawson visited with Orland friends Wednesday.

The village board has voted in favor of the new sidewalk ordinance for building new sidewalks on the south side of 143rd street and raising other walks to grade. The work will be done by special assessment.

Special mission services will be held at the Christ Lutheran church Sunday followed by a basket lunch.
